Hello:

I worked for Clyde Miller as a software developer for about four years. His responsibilities included managing staff and student workers, designing software requirements with customers and engineers, managing a team of software engineers, maintaining servers, hiring new employees, solving computer hardware problems, mentoring new hires, curating databases, and much more.

During my time as his employee he demonstrated excellence at all the above—there was little Clyde did not eagerly and masterfully handle, with extra helpings of critical thought and care. It was with Clyde's skilled leadership, that our team brought two major software projects online to the delight of our customers. The success of our products (not to mention the large amount of positive feedback he received) proved his ability to learn, manage, and solve complicated issues.

Clyde was highly respected by me and my co-workers for his competence. He was a crucial member of our team. He is passionate, creative, intelligent, and tactful.

Thus, I highly recommend Clyde for any position he applies for.

Sincerely,

Daniel Snider
